Marion county has made an investment of five thousand dollars in machinery to be used in building hard roads. Every dollar so invested in this way is better than money put out at high rate of interest.

Chairman Griggs of the Democratic congressional campaign committee will shortly establish permanent headquarters in Washington, to be kept open all the year round. A campaign of education is to be started as soon as congress convenes, and thousands of copies of notable speeches made in favor of Democratic principles will be circulated through the mails.

The constitutional amendment providing for three additional justices of the supreme court was carried by the decisive majority of 2,594 out of a total of 8,636 votes counted; and the amendment providing for an additional judicial circuit was carried by a majority of 2,041 out of 8,299 votes counted. The official canvass shows that Jeff B. Brown for railroad commissioner received a larger vote than R. Hudson Burr. The vote for congressman in the new third district was only about two thirds as much as the vote polled for congressman in either the first or second district.

John W. Gates, the steel, iron and poker king, has not a very high regard for professional men. He expressed the opinion a day or two ago that "an ordinary boy with little ambition had better fight shy of a trade, and enter one of the professions." Almost anything will do for the professions, according to Mr. Gates, but it takes brains for business. Mr. Gates said also that every young man should "read some good newspaper; provided there is one published." He said that he had made his own fortune by "attending strictly to my own business and working sixteen hours a day when the emergency demanded it."

Mr. Cleveland's Opinion.

Ex-President Cleveland is sure that the outlook for the Democratic party is of the most cheering kind. In an article in Sunday's New York World he sets forth some views respecting the party which will be approved very generally by Democrats. He warns the party that in order to win success it must not yield to the "temptations of expediency," as it did in recent campaigns. It must adhere firmly to what are recognized as Democratic doctrines.

There is no mistaking Mr. Cleveland's meaning. He believes that by yielding to the pressure in favor of certain Populist doctrines for the purpose of getting the vote of the Populist party the Democratic party lost the confidence of the people. A party to be successful must adhere to its principles. It shows a disposition to sacrifice them, with the hope of winning votes from those who are not in accord with them, it is almost certain to lose ground.

If the Democratic party would be successful, says Mr. Cleveland, it must adopt such a platform and nominate such candidates as will convince the people that it is again in harmony with true Democratic sentiment.

In Mr. Cleveland's opinion a return to true Democratic doctrines will not endanger Democratic success. The people recognize and appreciate honesty and consistency, and they will respond to Democratic appeals when the Democratic party gets on genuine Democratic ground.

Of course there are those who insist that the party has not departed from true Democratic doctrines, but it cannot be denied that concessions were made in 1896 and 1900 to the Populists for the purpose of capturing the Populist vote. As Mr. Cleveland looks at the situation, the Democratic party should declare in favor of a tariff for revenue only, against aggressive expansion, against trusts and against the extravagance which the Republicans have introduced into the administration of the government.

All of these issues, says the Savannah News, are good ones and Democrats would support each and every one of them. With a platform containing them and no other declarations the Democratic party would stand a fair chance of success in a presidential campaign.

The Democratic party is the party of the people. They recognize its beneficent aims and purposes. Unless, therefore, it yields to the temptations of expediency there is no good reason why it should not be successful in the next national campaign.

A Very Hardy Orange.

The citrus trifoliata is a Japanese hedge orange that is exceedingly hardy, and will naturally stand extreme cold weather. It has for years been used in Florida by the more progressive orange men as stock on which to bud other and finer varieties. Many efforts have also been made to use it as the parent in producing new varieties of finer flavor and larger size that will stand the rigors and frosts of winter, and with encouraging results.

But it was left to a Louisiana grower to carry the evolution to completion. After ten years of experimentation and hibernation he has produced an orange which he claims will flourish and bear delicious fruit in the frozen north, where the temperature goes below zero.

This successful developer of one of the marvels of the age is J. L. Norman, of the Hillside Nursery, at Marksville, La.

Mr. Norman calls his orange the Nol Cross-Bred. Recently he sent a bunch of the fruit to the New Orleans Times Democrat, and that paper says they measured an average of six and one-half inches in circumference. In color, they were bright yellow. The skin was clean, smooth and thin. They had fewer seeds than the ordinary sweet orange, and were of unusually fine flavor. The tree is said to be very prolific. While it has the foliage of the Satsuma, it has the numerous thorn characteristics of the trifoliata. Writing to the Times-Democrat relative to the sample sent, Mr. Norman says:

"It is the earliest of any of my new creations so far, out of many seedlings. By infusing the hardy citrus trifoliata blood into the sensitive Satsuma, I have obtained varieties that can stand a zero temperature. You will find this orange of good quality with possibly a little bitter taste, which is, however, almost imperceptible. In size the fruit is intermediate between the parent varieties. It is globular shaped, thin skinned, with few seeds. The tree is thorny, and very prolific. The crossing and interbreeding of the orange and the compound can be made as very numerous as the chessboard. I am much pleased with the result, so far within the brief time of a few years that I have engaged in this fascinating work in the vast field of unexplored horticulture, but it seems that when one embarks in these interesting experiments he never tires of trying to fathom the unknown—always after the unattainable. It is from the second generation of seedlings that I am expecting many sports from the original type. You will notice from the foliage I send you their varied form brought about by artificial means. It seems like a fairy tale to talk about growing shiny-leaved trees laden with golden fruit along the banks of the great lakes of the north, where the temperature drops below zero, but this is by no means an impossibility. Stranger things have been brought about by artificial means."

The Beaujean-Goode Wedding.

Sunday night was the occasion of one of the prettiest weddings ever witnessed in Melbourne, when the nuptials of Miss Annie Elma Goode and Mr. Claude Merwin Beaujean were celebrated in Holy Trinity Episcopal church, Rev. Stuart Martin officiating.

Before the appointed hour the church was filled with those invited and many were unable to find seating room. At 8 o'clock the bridal party entered the church to the strains of the wedding march played by Madam E. M. Campbell and passed up the aisle to the chancel. The dainty ribbon bearers, Miss Blanche Snedeker and Master Fletcher Stewart, led the party, followed by the ushers, Messrs. Allen Campbell and A. J. Hoke, Jr., with Mr. Dan McCarty groomsmen, Miss Jessie M. Goode, maid of honor; Miss Mozell Williams, bridesmaid, preceded the bride leaning on the arm of her father, Mr. R. W. Goode.

At the chancel were awaiting the groom with his best man, Mr. Alex. J. Goode, and on the approach of the bride she was received by the groom and together they took their places beneath the floral bell suspended from the chancel arch and there heard the charges and joined in the responses of the impressive ceremony that made them man and wife.

The vision of the wedding party as they stood within the chancel was one never to be forgotten by one not familiar with such scenes in a section where tropical decorations abound. There were over two thousand roses and other beautiful flowers used to fine advantage in the church by the Misses Allie and Mollie Nicholson, Mozell Williams, Mattie Brown, Madam Campbell and other friends in decorating.

The bride, herself, was a vision of loveliness in pure white swiss trimmed with lace and satin ribbon, with bridal veil fastened to her hair and with orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of Bride roses. The maid of honor wore white organdie trimmed with white lace and satin ribbon, bouquet of Marechal Niel roses; the bridesmaid in pale blue silk, bouquet pink roses.

At the close of the ceremony the wedding party passed down the aisle to the west end of the church, where an informal reception was held congratulatory to the happy young couple. After the reception the bridal party, relatives and a few friends repaired to the home of the bride's parents, where a wedding breakfast awaited them. Here also was to be seen the many beautiful and expensive presents sent by friends far and near, all bearing congratulations and kind wishes expressive of the esteem felt for this popular young couple.

A HEALTH POLICY

The system is, from natural causes, debilitated or run-down both in the spring and fall. The seasons' changes are always a tax on the human organism. The blood becomes impure in the fall, spring, and vitality lags in the fall. A little care, a little assistance, and nature will do the rest, as it is always trying to maintain health. Frequently the weakest organ will show the most disorder, and this often leads to wrong treatment. For the debilitated conditions of spring or fall, or any other time, for that matter, the right thing to do is to build up the whole system. It is not your stomach, or liver, or nerves alone that cause the trouble; you are weakened all over and must have renewed strength and vitality. These you cannot get so quickly or surely or safely as by using

Dr. HARTER'S IRON TONIC

When you use Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic you are helping to renew the vigor of every fiber of your body. You are cleansing and enriching your blood; you are strengthening your stomach and increasing the digestive fluids; you are building up and renewing the activity of your kidneys and liver; and you are feeding and revitalizing your nervous system. You cannot do this without getting well, and you cannot take Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic without doing it.

CHICAGO, ILL., Nov. 26, 1901.
The Dr. Harter Medicine Co., Dayton, O.
GENTLEMEN:—I unhesitatingly recommend Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic, as I firmly believe it is the best tonic on the market to-day. Every spring and fall my system seems to be in need of a tonic, and for the past three years I have taken a bottle of your tonic twice a year.
